

British Group Scheduled to Inspect OAC

A team of 14 British ammunition specialists will visit the Ordnance Ammunition Center next Wednesday to study manufacturing methods.

The visit is part of a tour of nine munition plants in the United States, sponsored by the Mutual Security agency as a technical assistance project.

The MSA is the successor to the Economic Co-operation administration.

The team leader will be Brigadier Ernest Merrill Ransford of Chislehurst, chief inspector of armaments, British Ministry of Supply, ordnance factory department.